Preparing the ground...

...people-centred co-production & engagement to support sustainable community development.

Communities, places, and organisations are composed of the intangible – stories, memories, values, cultures – and the tangible – people, nature, objects, buildings, towns.

We must understand and work with these elements to co-create transformative pathways and patterns towards inclusion, sustainability, and resilience.

We work with communities and stakeholders to co-create meaningful connections through:

EM|otional mapping – understanding and revealing the emotional, social, cognitive, and physical landscape (past, present and future) of places, spaces and people;

EM|pathetic connections – making meaning, relationships, and connections, together, across time and space;

EM|odied reflections – using embodied experiences and drawing on the senses to make sense of the world and reconnect with the environment and each other;

EM|bedding shared learning and knowledge – co-creating or revealing collective cognition towards vision and action; and,

EM|powering communities – engaging with communities to co-create transformation pathways and implement new initiatives.

"What interests me is the opportunity for all of us to become something different from what we are, by constructing spaces that contribute something to the experience of who we are".
